

CASCA

Principles of Communication and Information Sharing

La Société Canadienne d'Anthropologie, [electronically moved on 30-OCT-2020]
Canadian Anthropology Society, [electronically moved on 30-OCT-2020]

CASCA Principles of Communication and Information Sharing

1. Content must demonstrate clear relevance to the advancement of anthropological and ethnological inquiry in Canada, including providing opportunities for Canadian anthropologists to advance their careers and enhance their research activities.
2. Content must conform to ethical standards for the practice of anthropology as normally described in research ethics guidelines of Canadian universities and granting agencies.
3. Content must not promote events, activities or businesses that are engaged in practices that are inconsistent with professional ethics and the deepest respect for the environment, human rights, social justice and indigenous peoples.
4. Content must not directly indicate or favour a partisan political preference.

Listserve, Website, and Twitter (One-way) Communication Includes:

1. CASCA conference announcements, including calls for papers
2. CASCA and Anthropologica recruitment calls
3. CASCA awards, including but not limited to the Weaver-Tremblay, CASCA Fellows, Salisbury Award Grant, Student Travel Grants, CASCA Teaching Awards, Women's Network Lifetime Achievement Award, and Women's Network Student Award
4. Resolutions and related letters on public affairs
5. Other CFPs and conference announcements
6. Job announcements

Facebook Group

Our Facebook Group is used as a networking tool, to promote research publications, notify others of upcoming events, start discussions, and contribute to building a strong and growing community of anthropologically minded people. The administrators will attempt to review and publish submissions with minimal delay.